Spring Break

Midterms Are Here: How You Can Support Your

Student

Midterm season is a major milestone in the semester—it's a time when students are balancing exams, papers, and projects all at once. While it can be stressful, it's also a great opportunity for growth and reflection. As a parent or family member, your encouragement and support can go a long way in helping your student stay focused and confident.

Here are a few ways you can help during midterms:

- Be a source of encouragement. A quick message or phone call wishing them luck can provide a much-needed boost.
- Promote balance. Remind your student to take short breaks, get enough sleep, and eat well. A clear mind helps more than an all-nighter!
- Help them stay organized. Suggest they create a simple study schedule or to-do list to keep track of assignments and exams.
Point them to campus resources. Many colleges offer free tutoring, study groups, and quiet spaces—remind them to take advantage of these supports.
- Stay positive. If things don't go perfectly, help them focus on what they can learn and how they can move forward.

Midterms are a time of challenge, but also a chance for students to see what they're capable of. With your support, they can push through the pressure and come out stronger on the other side.

Into the Woods

Kellogg Community College's Theatre Department is teaming up with Battle Creek's What A Do Theatre Company to present the award-winning musical Into the Woods—and your student won't want to miss it! This exciting collaboration brings Stephen Sondheim's beloved (and slightly twisted!) take on Grimm's fairy tales to life with a talented cast, a live 16-piece orchestra, and stunning visuals, including puppetry and animated projections.

Location:

All performances will take place at the Binda Performing Arts Center on KCC's Battle Creek campus (450 North Ave.).

Tickets:

- $10 for students, KCC employees, seniors, and military members
- $15 for the general public

Tickets are available online at kelloggcommunitycollege.ludus.com or at the door (while supplies last).

This show marks the beginning of an exciting new partnership between KCC Theatre and What A Do, and promises to be a memorable night out for families and theatre lovers alike.
