In the News

- November 8: National First-Generation College Celebration We Celebrate You: Share Your Story! Every year on November 8, colleges nationwide celebrate First-Generation College Celebration Day, honoring students who are the first in their families to earn a college degree. The day was established by COE (Council for Opportunity in Education) and NASPA's Center for First-Generation Student Success, marking the anniversary of the 1965 Higher Education Act, a landmark that expanded college access for millions of first-generation students.
